

Mother's Day 2017: The Mother Warns the Tornado

Today we bring you a fierce depiction of maternal love, written by poet Catherine Pierce PhD- who is Dr. Kardos's sister-in-law.

We hope your Mother's Day is full of flowers and free of tornados.

-Drs. Lai and Kardos

The Mother Warns the Tornado

I know I've had more than I deserve.

These lungs that rise and fall without effort,
the husband who sets free house lizards,

this red-doored ranch, my mother on the phone,
the fact that I can eat anything—gouda, popcorn, massaman curry—without worry. Sometimes I feel like I've been overlooked. Checks and balances, and I wait for the tally to be evened.
But I am a greedy son of a bitch, and there
I know we are kin. Tornado, this is my child.
Tornado, I won't say I built him, but I am his shelter. For months I buoyed him in the ocean, on the highway; on crowded streets
I learned to walk with my elbows out.
And now he is here, and he is new, and he is a small moon, an open face, a heart.
Tornado, I want more. Nothing is enough.
Nothing ever is. I will heed the warning protocol, I will cover him with my body, I will wait with mattress and flashlight,
but know this: If you come down here—
if you splinter your way through our pines,
if you suck the roof off this red-doored ranch,
if you reach out a smoky arm for my child—
I will turn hacksaw. I will turn grenade.
I will invent for you a throat and choke you.
I will find your stupid wicked whirling head and cut it off. Do not test me.
If you come down here, I will teach you about greed and hunger. I will slice you into palm-sized gusts. Then I will feed you to yourself.
